

TRADITIONAL FISH DRYING AND STORAGE TECHNIQUES USED BY THE TRIBAL'S OF BASTAR REGION (CHHATTISGARH)

Ajay Banik

Sos in forestry and wildlife, Bastar Vishwavidyalaya, Jagdalpur (C.G.)

ajaybanik07@gmail.com

Abstract: Traditionally fishing has been the one of the core of subsistence life throughout most of the tribal's of Bastar region. Tribal's depend mainly on the food products available naturally from the forests for their survival and living, fishes are one of the main food product in their diet. Investigations are described to show the traditional fish drying and storage practices used by the tribal's of Bastar region.

Keywords: Bastar, Chulla, Jungle, Mongri, Sukuwa, Traditionally, Tribal's

REFERENCES

- Bala, B.K. and Mondol, M.R.A. (2001). Experimental Investigation on Solar Drying of Fish Using Solar Tunnel Dryer. Drying Technol., 19: 427-436.
- Caurie, M.; Lee, T.C. and Chichester, C.O. (1977). Underutilization of Food Technology Resulting in Losses of Available Food in West Africa. International Center for Marine Resource Development, University of Rhode Island, Kingston, Rhode Island, USA.
- FAO. (2001). Example of successful in agriculture and rural development in the south. Sharing innovative experience, 5: 240-254.
- James, D. (1983). The Production and Storage of Dried Fish Fisheries Report 279, FAO, Rome, Italy.
- Pradhan, A.; Nag S.K. and Patil, S.K. (2011). Traditional fishing techniques of tribes in Bastar region of Chhattisgarh. IJTK., 10(2): 386-387.
- Tahy, C.; Vogel, C. and Christiansen, P. (1982). Preserving Food by Drying. Peace Corps, Washington, D.C. USA.